This is a big deal, because FIFA contains hundreds of models in the main game. A player goes through a simulated game, and the 'player performance' of that player is represented by a combination of all of the activities of the player in a match. This new system has been designed to reduce the amount of work and time spent in visualising how every single player performed in every game, and allows us to create more accurate and more lifelike simulations. How does FIFA's new game engine work? FIFA uses various types of data to create an accurate representation of a player's performance and skills. Motion capture data from the 22 players in the game is used to create an accurate representation of how those 22 players performed in the match. These data are then used to simulate the on-pitch situation, and combine the movement of the 22 players in an accurate simulation of the match, with the actions and movements of the players in the game. This takes the time required to create even more realistic animations, with improved player interactions and more reaction to the ball. How does player movement impact the gameplay experience? With its complex on-pitch animation system, FIFA 22 introduces an innovative form of advanced movement that will prove to be very important to gamers when controlling players. This next-generation game engine allows for players to perform more naturally and with more smoothness. Our research and development team spent three years in this process, integrating new systems and technologies to achieve new breakthroughs in game mechanics, improving the player experience and experience of gameplay. The new engine features an advanced physics model, character dynamics, the ability to switch in and out of natural playing mode, more realistic ball physics, realistic collision deformation, and more realistic AI behaviour. This, alongside our new Technical Awareness System (TAS) and TAS Pro, and new Player Awareness System (PAS) features, brings a whole new dimension to digital player experience. What are player interactions? "In-game collisions and player interactions are a fundamental part of the development of FIFA games," said Alex Young, Head of FIFA Game Development at Electronic Arts. "We have already seen examples of this, with the ability to switch in and out of Natural Movement mode and integrate advanced physics. We are continuing to develop our in-game physics and collision system to give players more control in the game. "One of the most important feedback that we received
